Class: PP

Date: September 2022

Description:

Tell me a fact and I'll learn, Tell me the truth and I'll believe But tell me a story and it will live in my Heart..

Once upon a time , long long ago , far away , teachers did not use fancy power point presentations , overhead projectors or even the chalk boards. They simply shared their knowledge through stories. The power of stories has been recognised for centuries and even today also. Story is a natural mode of thinking and language development as young minds began to inquire, wonder and ask many questions. When teacher tells the story there is a magic moment, children sit enthralled , mouth open and eyes wide.

The story of the Monkey and the cap seller brought lots of entertainment and making the monkey headgear after the story was full of excitement. Children wore the head gears and danced with joy .
