The program started in classes 06th - 08th at the given scheduled time, wherein the trainers introduced the idea and operations of the SDG club. The sessions are divided into Public Speaking, Sustainable Development Goals and Leadership, that would be covered in the next 3 months.

Post self briefing, the trainers introduced students about the importance of public speaking, understanding of the sustainable development goals (SDGs) and leadership qualities and promised to teach every aspect with innovation and creativity to make it a fun experience overall. In addition, an activity to introduce the concept of critical thinking amongst students was conducted, namely “Let’s go to Mars” wherein the students had to introduce themselves and name one item that they would carry on their trip to Mars.

The students gave myriad of answers, to which the trainer had to respond either yes or no. Additionally, the students had the task to figure out the reason behind the response from the trainer. The students came up with all sorts of reasonings which created an active engagement amongst the class. Lastly, students were taught a quick trick to remember the first 4 SDG goals and as an assignment were asked to brainstorm more tricks to memorize other Global Goals.

In a nutshell, the session turned out to be exciting and insightful.
